TikTok – What an experience!

When the phone buzzed, I knew it was Mrs Smith demanding me to do a TikTok video for the children! Now, I am not one to shy away from a challenge but where to start. After downloading the app, I was presented by what can only be described as people doing silly dances, silly moves and just more silly stuff. After an hour of watching videos (I think I'm slightly obsessed with TikTok now), I chose to do the 'Plank Challenge.' After convincing my partner to join me in this madness and after at least 20 – 25 takes, we completed the video! I am sure that the 'outtakes' are far funnier than the actual TikTok video I did!

I love Netflix. I've watched so many fun films and TV programmes. However, since being at home, I've found that I actually spend more time looking for what to watch, then actually watching something. How does that work? I have watched 'Friends' about 3465 times and I think I know every line that Joey says!

Joe Wicks – what a hero! After three weeks at home, I think I have eaten my own body weight in chocolate (well, it was Easter!) This legend has got me (most mornings) active and keen to start the day. I love his enthusiasm for sport and I know he has inspired many. I love the fancy dress on Friday, although my Burglar Bill outfit on World Book Day is all I've got!
