Title of Story: _____

The unexpected adventure

I slowly opened my eyes and felt the salty water rush against my shivering legs. A tropical island stood before my very eyes. My legs felt like a mix of spaghetti and jelly as I clambered out of the freezing water.

I could now see a lush forest teeming with ~~middle~~ wildlife. As my eyes adjusted, I saw a leopard in a wrinkled oak tree with moist leaves and swinging vines. Humming birds echoed throughout the island. A humid atmosphere swelled around me. Suddenly, a wild cat jumped out of a bush surrounded by lions. The cat was a stray black cat. What was it doing here, out on a stranded island? As the lions closed in I jumped and started waving my arms and shouting. I managed to scare the beasts away, but the cat started to hiss. Eventually, it calmed down and decided to rub against my shivering, wobbly legs.

slowly, I picked it up and realised it was a girl. So I decided to name it. I stood on the fine, silky sand and the perfect name came to me; Silky!

Silky and I went to explore the island, more trees started to appear. I slowed down as we and Silky stumbled across tree roots and ploughed on into the darkness. A big tribe of humans were perched upon a log. They narrowed their eyes as we approached. "Hello," I said as politely as I could.

"Oompha," cried the biggest one.

Suddenly, as if I had pulled a trigger a stampede of wild humans charged at us. My feet seemed to be rooted to the ground. Cold dirty hands grasped me under my arms, and hoisted me into the air.

The next thing I knew, I was clutching Silky ~~in my~~ and stuck in an arrow cage.

However, when I looked down what I saw made my teeth chatter even though it was one of the hottest days. IT WAS A 3,000 METRE DROP! Suddenly, the cage jolted forwards then it was as if the floor had disappeared. I seemed to hover in mid-air. "Noooooooooooo." I cried as I plummeted to my death.

Weakly, I seemed to open my eyes and discovered that I was on a hammock, with a group of pirates surrounding me. They all had anxious looks on their faces as I stared up at them. "Are you ~~you~~ ^{cook}?" Stammered the captain. "Yes." I said a bit too quickly. Out of the corner of my watery eye I saw a small pirate pull up the sails. Unexpectedly, it felt like we were traveling at the speed of light. "Where are we going!" I shouted over the noise. "Home." A pirate shouted back.
